Not Good As Butter.

In Farm and Fireside are the following reasons why the welfare of the dairy and of the consumer demand that oleomargarine be labeled plainly as such and not be allowed to masquerade as a better food.

"Some scientists of standing may be quoted to the effect that oleo is a good food product as butter. These statements were made prior to or in ignorance of the discoveries of McCollum of Wisconsin. McCollum has shown that there is a vast difference between the nutritive qualities of butter and the body fat of animals, or vegetable oils. Young animals, for instance, will not grow unless they receive in their food a sufficient quantity of butterfat, or some other fat (like the yolks of eggs) produced by the mother for the nourishment of her young.

"The chemist cannot tell some of these fats from mother fat, but the stomach can. Oleomargarine is as good a food as lard or tallow, or olive oil; but as a food it cannot take the place of butter. It ranks with meats, vegetable oils, and grains. It is not the same as butter.

"It should not be colored to look like butter. To do so is to allow it to compete unfairly."

MUCH DISTRUST IN POLAND AGAINST GERMAN METHODS

Warsaw, Dec. 23.—It has taken the most strenuous efforts of German forces to overcome the epidemic of typhoid, smallpox, rabies and other diseases that they found prevalent in Poland when they arrived. They had to contend, not only with a shortage of medicaments, but also with the distrust of the people and a distinct opposition to vaccination that was overcome only with difficulty.

Poland was immediately divided up into forty-nine sections, in thirty-five of which it was possible to install German physicians, and additional doctors are being brought in as fast as possible. The first duty was to establish sanitary conditions. With but few exceptions the cities and towns had never heard of a drainage system. The streets were disease breeders, and the public convenience stations were dangerous in the highest degree. In many places, including Lodz with its 400,000 inhabitants, the public was dependent for water on wells that were spreaders of disease. Seven thousand of Lodz's 10,000 wells have been examined and purified, and the balance will be fit for use within a few weeks.

Much to the astonishment of the Polish population, and not without opposition, the official notification of disease was required, especially in the prisons, the hospitals and other public institutions where the Germans found cholera, typhoid and typhus rife. The opposition to these measures was such that it was necessary to lay down severe penalties for failure to comply with the new regulations.

Even the schools were discovered to be disease breeders, through the medium of teachers who were sick. Great as the shortage of instructors was, and as many had to be forbidden attendance on their schools in order to check epidemics. A thorough house-cleaning of hospitals, schools and houses throughout the length and breadth of Poland was immediately begun.

Smallpox was the worst thing with which the Germans had to combat. They found an epidemic of it that ran in a northeasterly direction, and which was checked only by the vaccination of between 400,000 and 500,000 persons. The epidemic is broken now, but the vaccination of all the population is impossible because of a lack of personnel and of vaccine.

Typhus to a smaller extent existed, principally in Lodz, where strict German methods were introduced. Cholera was prevalent along the right bank of the Vistula, practically all of which has been stamped out by this time. To prevent the disease from travelling into Germany, via the water route, cholera prevention stations were installed all along the Vistula from Warsaw to Thorn. Only infected wounded prisoners not far enough advanced to give evidences of the disease have ever carried it into Germany.

Such hospitals as existed in Poland were in part destroyed when the Germans arrived, and the latter had to erect new structures in addition to putting the old ones in commission again. Some 200 hospitals, six disinfected establishments each capable smaller institutions of the same sort, and countless improvised sterilizers, have been built during the past few months.

The Germans found an astonishing number of mad dogs, which apparently had acquired the rabies by starvation and by feeding on the stagnant remains of food not destroyed by fire. Many soldiers were bitten and infected. Dogs by the hundreds have been shot, and the hospitals have been supplied with the very latest and most effective hydrophobia preventives and curatives.

Since the German medical forces not only must handle disease but also prevent it where possible, the strictest possible watch is kept on all food stuffs. A bureau has been established which maintains veterinary surgeons, examines slaughter houses, and prosecutes purveyors of impure foods.

In order that existing needs might be supplied, the exportation ban in Germany on certain medicaments was lifted, and Poland today is in a position to receive all that it needs in the pharmaceutical line. Pharmacists in Poland are required to list all their supplies, and speculation in such supplies has been reduced to a minimum by heavy penalties.

"German hygiene," declared the physician in charge of all the work in Poland, "remains as a heritage to whatever government takes charge. We have established a basis on which others in the future can build."

THE GARY DINNER

McAdoo and Tumulty Interested in the Import of the Event.

Judge Gary's dinner of last Friday night at which Colonel Roosevelt was the guest of honor continued to be the chief topic of political comment here yesterday despite the assertion of the colonel and others that it had no political significance. Those who attended continued to keep their counsel concerning what actually took place and Colonel Roosevelt, who is the rallying point of all the gossip regarding what might be the significance of it, let it be known that he would make no further comment until after New Year's.

While the diners persisted in shunning inquiries, there were indications in other quarters that the political possibilities of that gathering of men of large affairs was making a strong appeal. In Wall street it kindled the ardor of men who have been engrossed in war stocks. It wasn't long before the word got abroad that Secretary McAdoo was using the long distance telephone to ask his friends in the financial district as to what it all meant.

Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to the president, also made inquiries as to how the news of the dinner was being taken. Especially was he anxious to know what the coming together of captains of industry, on both sides of the big political fence indicated to those who do business below Fulton street.

Paul M. Warburg of the federal reserve board, who used to be a member of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., came to town yesterday. Report had it that he had made a hurried trip to find out for himself why Jacob H. Schiff, always a staunch democrat, was among the guests. Everybody admitted that the explanation that it was just a social gathering was a good one, but the idea persisted that the colonel had been invited for some other purposes.

The first interpretation put upon the dinner was that Judge Gary and his friends wanted to consult Colonel Roosevelt as to what he thought the republican party ought to do in the coming campaign. Others thought that the diners had a very clear idea of what the republican party ought to do and merely wanted to find out what the colonel was going to do.

Again there was the opinion that the proposition that President Wilson must be beaten, his all hazards had been put to the colonel and he had been asked not to do anything that would tend to disturb that program.

Comment on the dinner was inevitably coupled with the well authenticated report that progressive leaders have been considering the advisability of holding their national convention in Chicago on June 7, the date of the republican gathering. George W. Perkins has said that it would not be held until the two older parties got through, but from Chicago there came yesterday the report that Harold Ickes, chairman of the progressive party, had made a reservation for the colonel at the Congress hotel for the period of the republican convention. The progressive national committee will meet in Chicago on January 11 to fix the date for the party's convention and if June 7 is fixed many progressives here will not be surprised.

Mr. Perkins was willing yesterday to talk politics but about the Gary dinner he was not to be convinced that a gathering of reactionary leaders in the republican party who were responsible for the split in the party in 1912, are going to attempt the same thing this year.

"And if they do," said Mr. Perkins, "the same vote will come out against them as did in 1912."

"But if they would nominate Justice Hughes, wouldn't the progressive party endorse him?"

"That is not to be considered," he said. "The progressives can't follow because in some of the states there are laws against endorsing."

Mr. Perkins said further that in his opinion nothing is or has been wrong with the republican party, but with the men who have tolerated themselves upon the people as the leaders of it.

"And if these leaders ignore the wishes of the people as they did in 1912," he added, "the afraid that Colonel Roosevelt will have to be drafted."

"Have you heard of any movement to make Colonel Roosevelt the candi-

NO INCONCLUSIVE PEACE SAYS BORDEN

Canadian Premier Endorses Attitude of the Mother Country and France.

New York, Dec. 23.—Canada and the other British Dominions are as firmly resolved as is the mother country that the European war shall not be terminated by any inconclusive peace, declared Sir Robert Laird Borden, the prime minister of the Canadian government, in an address tonight at the 110th annual dinner of the New England Society in New York.

First Address Since War in U. S.
It was the first public address delivered by Sir Robert in the United States since the beginning of the war and it follows closely upon his visit to England and France for official conferences as to Canadian participation in the conflict. After reviewing his own intimate associations with New England life and ideals, and recalling, among other things, how many thousand Canadians fought under the Stars and Stripes in New England regiments during the Civil war, and speaking of the phenomenal growth of the Canadian Dominion, he outlined the relations of Canada to the European war. He said:

"To the Canadian people thus immersed in the pursuit of material development there came little more than a year ago a call and a test which searched and tried the spirit of the nation. Until then Canada had known little of the actualities of war for a century. The course which she should pursue was entirely within the judgment and disposition of her parliament and people. From the first time there was not the slightest hesitation.

High for Peaceful Solution.
"Recalled hurriedly to Ottawa on the first day of August, 1914, I took the responsibility, in the absence of my colleagues, of sending to the British government a message which expressed our most earnest hope that a peaceful solution of international difficulties might be achieved and our strong desire to cooperate in every possible way for that purpose; but which conveyed also to that government the firm assurance that if unhappily war should ensue the Canadian people would be united in a common resolve to put forth every effort and to make every sacrifice necessary to ensure the integrity and maintain the honor of our empire."

"The pledge thus given has been most fully redeemed by the Canadian people."

As to Justice of Cause.
"I do not propose to argue or affirm the justice of our cause. The great controlling facts have been firmly established and they are widely known. Upon these facts the people of neutral nations must found their own conclusions. The Canadian people are impressed with the most earnest and intense conviction that our cause is just and that it will prevail. Undoubtedly it concerns the power, influence and destiny of our empire. But we are concerned beyond all question that this conflict of vastly wider significance and that its determination must exercise a profound influence upon the world's future. Man had never been so grievously oppressed by the 'petite force et dure' of militarism and armaments as during the past half century. This is not an inspiring record after all the aspiration, the effort and the sacrifices of a thousand years."

Pacifist Enlists for War

London, Dec. 23.—R. D. Denman, M. P., hitherto known as one of the chief pacifists and a bitter anti-war speaker, has obtained a commission in the artillery. The news of his going into the army has consequently brought discouragement to the union of democratic control. Ramsey MacDonald's peace organization. It was only recently that Denman brought out a pamphlet entitled, "On the Road to Peace" in which he ridiculed England's position in the war and stirred up a great deal of anger against himself. In a consequence of this, the Liberal party council of Carlisle, his constituency, passed a vote of no confidence in him and instructed its executive to find another candidate for parliament. However, Denman declared he would run again at the next election on his own ticket. He is 39 years of age and the brother of Lord Denman.

date of the republican party?"
"I have not, and I'm not bothering about the republican party. I have enough to do running the progressive party."

"Do you think Colonel Roosevelt intends to be a candidate?"
"I know nothing of Colonel Roosevelt's intentions. I have talked to nobody who does."

Mr. Perkins added that while in Chicago recently he had made arrangements for the national gathering of his party and that the progressives would go straight ahead with their own convention. "The New York sun."
